Yumi project is a neat representation of a harmonious bent bow. Floating curves in the air that create physical objects out of a simple gesture is a very complex exercise that requires patience and balance between good proportions and technical solutions.

Niels Bendtsen, for his first collaboration with Moroso, has designed a collection made up of a lounge chair, available in large and small versions, a dining chair and a coffee table - based on a very simple principle, but with a sophisticated language. A recurring theme of the collection is the tubular structure which traces the profile of the entire range. In the case of the seats, the four legs and the tubular frame support a padded seat cushion and a wraparound back which can be padded like the seat or woven, designing a special sunray effect. The Yumi coffee table is instead made up of three legs, held together by three semicircles, and by the glass top. The possibility of mixing the frame with different coverings makes Yumi a polyhedral collection, elegant yet informal.
