TREVOR MEIN & SUSAN KNIGHT
Cavaradossi Series

The works in this series are by artist and equestrian Susan Knight and photographer Trevor Mein. In conjunction they bring the art of dressage to the two-dimensional arena of the photograph (dressage is a French term most commonly translated to mean training.)

Like the artist, the dressage rider is concerned with the principles of composition; line, shape, unity, rhythm and balance. Dressage at an elite level is the highest expression of horse training 'the art of riding and training a horse in a manner that develops obedience, flexibility and balance.' The relationship between horse and rider is central to the success of all dressage movements.

In the occasional glimpse of the rider's gloved hand we are reminded of the human presence in these images and the finely tuned flow of bodily signals that telegraph directions to the horse.

By breaking down the dressage sequence and arresting all movement, the images capture ephemeral details and reveal what the naked eye cannot register because of the speed at which the event unfolds. The instant is broken down even further as the horse is abstracted into parts of a whole, drawing our attention to a living geometry of lines, planes and curves.
