SEGRETO — RON GILAD 2014

2

Even in these modern high-tech times, when data and information can be conveniently stored in tiny USB devices, we still have a physical space in our homes in which to keep and file away documents and objects we consider important. Now Ron Gilad, the eclectic Israeli designer, has reinvented the classic “secretaire”. To meet this need, Secret was created. No more old-fashioned desks with drawers, compartments for files, cabinets protected by intricate locks: their place is now taken by a triangular unit to suspend from a wall at any height, its bottom section opening up to reveal its secrets. Inside are tiny shelves and drawers in which to file away documents, letters, small books and other objects that need to be safely stored for retrieval at will. Thanks to a clever system of stay-rods, the lower part becomes a worktop to use when writing or to support a laptop or tablet. Which is why Segreto also has all the most modern multimedia connections. The unit comes in eucalyptus or American walnut finishes that make it easily matched with any interior décor. The external structure and the door frame can be made of walnut or eucalyptus while the internal structure is always lacquered in matt black.

FEATURES

Original triangular shaped desk designed to fulfill specific functions created by modern technology. The external structure and the door can be in American walnut or in Eucalyptus, but the internal structure is always finished in black matt lacquer.
